WM. GARVEY SEEKS TOGA

Wm. M. Garvey of Lockport is seeking the Republican nomination for County Judge of Will County.

Mr. Garvey, who was born in Ashland, Wisconsin, is 36 years of age. He removed to Chicago at the age of eighteen years upon leaving high school and entered the employ of one of the packing houses in the stock yards, where he remained until the entry of the United States into the World War in the spring of 1917. He enlisted as a private in the 131st Infantry, 33rd (Illinois) Division. While serving overseas he was gassed and wounded in action. Shortly after the signing of the Armistice he was commissioned a lieutenant of infantry.

Within a few months after his return home he entered Lewis Institute, where he completed a pre-legal course of study and then entered the law school of the University of Chicago. Upon his graduation three years later he was admitted to the practice of law in which he has been engaged ever since both in the counties of Cook and Will.

Mr. Garvey has lived in Lockport with his wife and three children since the year 1923, and at the present time has a law office there as well as in Joliet. He also is a member of the Town Board of Lockport.

Tinley Park Legion Notes

Members of this Post acted as hosts to the Central Woman's Club of Chicago Sunday afternoon at the Tribune 40 and 8 Camp at Orland. The patients were greatly cheered by the visit of the clubwomen. The afternoon was spent in playing games after which refreshments were served.

The Legion party Saturday evening was attended by about 100 people. Dancing occupied most of the evening. Refreshments were served. Credit for the success of the party is due to comrades Wallin and Rowden, who with their good wives planned the affair and did most of the work. We advise any organizations desiring to put on a real party to engage these two gentlemen.

The public is urged to remember the Big Dance at Saenger hall on Saturday night, March 1st. Music will be furnished by the popular Sammy Berk and his Rhythm Kings. This is the last dance before Lent. PAUL A. GRISWOLD, Adjutant Bruder has rendered the Mokena commuters in getting cheaper ticket rates between Mokena and Chicago and also a big reduction in the Joliet school ticket rate, the village board at their meeting Wednesday night, passed a resolution expressing their appreciation of Mr. Bruder's work and highly commending him for his service to the community.

Elmore Buys Reuter Sub. Div.

Tinley Park is on the verge of a tremendous sub-division boom within the very near future. Grover Elmore who has done much to boom Tinley Park by opening sub-divisions to the north and south of Tinley, has purchased the Reuter Company holdings south of Tinley and near his first sub-division. The former Reuter holdings will undoubtedly be thrown on the market in the near future.

A. & P. Manager Robbed, Taken For A Ride

Word was received late Saturday night by Mrs. Caroline Braun of Mokena that her son-in-law, Carl Schweer, manager of an A. & P. store in Chicago Heights, was held up by two young bandits as he was leaving the store and robbed of $400 in checks and some cash. He was ordered into his car at the point of a gun and was driven about two miles east of Chicago Heights and forced out of the car. He walked half a mile across a field to a farm house and called up the Chicago Heights police and reported the hold up. The car was found later in a damaged condition, but the robbers had made their escape. The banks being closed Saturday on account of Washington's birthday was the reason for Mr. Schweer having the store's day receipts in his possession.

With the Tinley Park Lions Club

The Tinley Lions Club are making plans for a big 4th of July celebration this year. The matter was gone over at the meeting Monday night.

The Lions also have made recommendations to the Village Board relative to a number of fire hazards in the village.

The next meeting will be March 10th at which time the full program of this year's activities of the club will be announced. An interesting feature will be the comparison of the Tinley Park of 25 years ago and of today. All the members are urged to attend.

New Rates Save Hundreds For Commuters

The new rates on commutation and 25 ride tickets between Tinley Park and Chicago and Mokena and Chicago will go into effect Saturday morning, March 1st. The new tickets have been received at both depots. The new rates will mean a saving of about $3,000 a year for the commuters of Mokena and Tinley Park. The commuters of both villages give the full credit for securing the rate reduction, to L. G. Bruder of Mokena who compiled all the data that was presented before the Illinois Commerce Commission when the petition for the rate reduction was considered by the commission. Mr. Bruder had his data so well prepared that there was no room for argument so the new rates were at once ordered by the commission.

AUTO BURNS

Late Tuesday night a big automobile was burned on the Crawford road a mile north of 183rd street, when the gas tank exploded. The car was totally ruined. The occupants escaped injury.

Abolish Personal Property Tax Says Sen. Huebsch

A large group of interested tax payers of Bremen township met at the Saenger hall, Tinley Park Tuesday night to hear Senator Arthur Huebsch of the 7th District discuss the tax situation. The senator pointed out that 85 per cent of the tax burden is borne by the farmer and small home owner. He further declared that the present personal property tax as now in vogue is unjust as it makes either a liar or a fool out of the tax payer. In order to get at the fellows who are not now paying tax on their stocks and bonds and other intangible property, the senator advocated the abolishment of the personal property tax system and the substitution of a state income tax with teeth in it to make the tax dodgers pay.

He pointed out that Cook County country districts are being taxed to the uttermost without fair representation. He also pointed out that railroads and big building owners give a certain valuation on their properties in excess of the value placed thereon by the board of review so that they can raise a larger income from the sale of securities on the high valuation. The senator decried the yard stick method of arriving at the value of property by estimating its worth in mortar and stone instead of placing a value on it according to the income of such property.

The senator also outlined the amendment to the state constitution to be voted on in November and asked the voters to support the new measure.

The new valuations placed on Cook county real estate for 1929 will most likely remain for the present in the opinion of the senator, and the new taxes, tho apparently high, will have to be paid. He denounced the crooked office holder and politician.

Senator Huebsch is a candidate for re-nomination on the Republican ticket at the April 8th primary.

James E. Tomlinson of Harvey, candidate for sheriff on the Republican ticket also took part in the program. Several other candidates also spoke. Assessor Charles Nielsen of Bremen township introduced the speakers.

Hearing On Mokena Sewer March 21st

The sanitary project which the Mokena Local Board of Improvements has been working on for some time, is to be acted upon soon. At the meeting of the Board Wednesday night, a resolution was passed that the sanitary sewer plans as presented by the engineer be adopted. It is understood that these plans have been prepared in conformity with the state provisions governing this type of sewer. The proposed sewer is estimated to cost $67,370 which, however, does not include the cost of land for the treating plant site.

The system will also take in two streets on the south side of the village in addition to the Front street and all streets north.

A public hearing on the proposed sewer system will be held at the village hall in Mokena on the night of March 21, 1930 at 7 p. m., at which time any of the property owners who wish to file objections may do so.

Midlothian Women Hold Garden Meet

The Midlothian Woman's Club Garden Department organized by Mrs. Fred Robinson, met for the first time Friday, Feb. 21st when an informal talk on fertilizer and spring plantings was the topic given by Mrs. Wallace B. Combs of Tinley Park, chairman of gardens of the third district. It was an interesting meeting conducive of much good inasmuch as this group decided to enter the contest at the Garden and Flower Show at the Sherman Hotel in five classes. Mrs. Pearl Miller, is the president of the club.

What Our Neighbors Say

Here is what the Lockport Leader says editorially about Mokena's fight for cheaper railroad fares:

"Mokena, thru the effort of L. G. Bruder and the publicity of its newspaper, has secured a reduction in monthly and 25 ride commutation tickets on the Rock Island. In addition, a train schedule has been revised to conform to the needs of commuters to Joliet schools. This was accomplished thru the regular channel of the Commerce Commission with the help of Rep. Lottie Holman O'Neill. Mokena has long suffered an excessive rate with inadequate service.

"There is a lesson in this for Lockport."

3 BANDITS GET FROM 1 YEAR TO LIFE

The three bandits who held up and robbed Fred Hick of the firm of Hick & Mesenbrink of Tinley Park at the point of a gun on two different occasions last fall and who were later arrested, were tried in the court of Judge Sullivan in the Criminal Court Building in Chicago last week and on Friday were sentenced to a term from one year to life in the Joliet penitentiary.

WOLF ROAD PAVING PLANS BEING RUSHED

Plans for the paving of Wolf Road thru Mokena are being pushed right along by the Will county engineer, Glenn Fletcher. The bridge plans for the bridge across Hickory Creek south of Mokena and for another bridge north of the village are expected very soon from the state highway department in Springfield following which contracts will be let for their construction and it is the expectation of the county engineer that all this can be done before April 1st.

The right of way on 143rd street has about been all secured as also on Maple road, and these highways are all to be paved this summer as also is a short connecting link on Wolf road with the Maple street road from the connecting point at the Will and Cook County line.

If there are any doubting Thomases as to whether these roads will be built this summer, they can be shown the absolute proof in the office of the Will County engineer.

Town Caucus At New Lenox

There is only one ticket in the field.

COUNT LUCKNER

THE SEA DEVIL

By Lotwell Thomas

Copyright by Doubleday, Doran & Co.

Luckner and his companions take passage on a vessel at Wakaya with the idea of capturing it when it put to sea. They are arrested by the British before the vessel sails and jailed at Suva, Fiji islands. A Japanese admiral tries to get information from Luckner.

"Tell me, count, where your Seeadler is."

"I was in a tight hole. I must strike a blow for my comrades out there on Mopelia. The elements I had to work upon lay in the fact that the diary which had been found mentioned merely that we had put stores aboard at Mopelia and told of the capture of the Manila and said nothing of the fact that we had sunk that ship. Then, also, the truth is rarely believed. I proceeded to skate very near the truth."

"The Seeadler," I replied, "was lost."

"How was it lost?"

"We got on the coral reef at Mopelia. We tried our best to get off, put our stores ashore to lighten the ship. But it was no use."

"What did you do then?"

"We went aboard the Manila."

"The four-mastered schooner Manila?"

"Yes, we captured her and took her along with us."

"Where is the Manila now?"

"She is waiting for me off Mopelia. My men are having a good vacation on the island until I come back."

"I say, Count, we Japanese are not such fools. You had the four-master Manila, and you sailed from Mopelia to the Fijis in a small boat."

"Yes," I replied, "There was not room enough for all of us aboard the Manila."

The admiral looked at me with a sly Oriental smile.

"Fine, I thought. I had figured out their minds correctly. They had not set straight out for Mopelia, in spite of their knowing that we had landed stores there, because it seemed wildly impossible that I with my five men had sailed from Mopelia to the Fijis in an open boat."

"Count," exclaimed the admiral, "I will tell you where your crew is. You did not leave a four-mastered schooner and sail twenty-three hundred miles in a lifeboat. You sailed here in the Manila, and, having got here, you put out in your lifeboat to capture another ship in a nearby harbor. You tell me your crew is at Mopelia, hoping I will get up steam immediately, go hurrying away for a few thousand miles on a wild-goose chase, and leave them in peace. The Manila is in these waters. In four days your crew will be my prisoners."

He respected me too much to think that I would ever give my crew away. He knew I would try to throw him off the scent. His object was to outwit me, to get my story and read between the lines.

"Very good, admiral," I thought, "let use see how it will work out."

We parted the best of friends. He was an excellent fellow. Our meeting had been one of mutual deceit with lies that no gentleman would tell in ordinary times. Now they were quite respectable, as ruses of war.

The ironical thing was that my men, who under the command of Lieutenant Kling were still living like lords at Mopelia, were destined to have much better luck in getting a ship than my little party had had through all our terrible hardships.

They caught a wireless message one day telling of our capture. So, fearing that their own whereabouts might soon be discovered, they hastily began to build a boat to sail away in, but, with the materials at their disposal, they were unable to construct anything like a seaworthy craft, capable of carrying that whole crowd. Then Dame Fortune smiled on them.

A French square-rigged schooner sighted the island and the wreck of the Seeadler.

"By Joe," exclaimed the captain, "we passed here six months ago and there was no wreck here! We may find castaways on the island. It looks as though we may find a good profit, too."

You see, a captain gets a third of the value of any wreck, ship, or cargo, that he saves. The schooner quickly veered toward the island.

It was a Sunday morning. On the island the men were sitting around, washing clothes, writing diaries, and so on. The chef was shooting snipe for dinner. Then the cry:

"Ship ahoy."

Kling took out a lifeboat with a boarding party, the strongest men he had, some of them the champion wrestlers. As they approached the schooner, the captain leaned over the rail and shouted down to them:

"Don't row so hard, boys. We will come for you."

Our sailors swarmed aboard. Pistols out.

"Hands up!"

The Frenchmen recognized the German uniform.

"Mon Dieu—des Allemands. I turn off my course to save castaways and I am captured by the Boches! Mon Dieu!"

The schooner was not big enough, nor had aboard provisions enough, for both the Germans and the prisoners. Kling decided to leave the prisoners, including the crew of the schooner on the island, where they would be comfortable enough. When he was a week or so out, he would send a wireless that would bring ships to their rescue. So, the whole of Seadertown was given over to the prisoners, and the schooner sailed away. She was named the Lutece, but my men discovered that she had been the German ship, the Fortuna. She had been seized by the French during the war. So she got her old name back. She was German again—a German auxiliary cruiser. For Kling fully intended to go right on buccaneering.

Three days after the Fortuna sailed, our former prisoners saw a cloud of smoke on the horizon. Steaming at full speed, her funnels belching smoke, the Japanese cruiser, Usuma, steered to the island. On her bridge the admiral swore in Japanese.

"By Joe, the count fooled me all right. He told me the truth. There is the wreck, and there are his men. Everything except the Manila. He tricked me with the tale about the Manila."

The Japanese found only men of the allied nations.

"Where are the Germans?"

"I'm sorry," replied the French captain, "but they sailed away three days ago in my ship, the Lutece."

The Japanese admiral was thoroughly disgusted at that, but of course he took the whole crowd aboard and took them back to the Fijis. It was of no use to go racing about the immense spaces of the Pacific looking for a solitary sailing square-rigged schooner.

Kling's plan was to sail around the Horn into the Atlantic, sink a few ships there, and then try to steal through the blockade and get back home. His course took him to Easter Island, a small, remote possession of Chile, where there was no wireless station. There he intended to overhaul the ship, which was in bad condition, and take aboard supplies and fresh water. On October 4, they sighted the island, but while sailing into the harbor struck an uncharted, sunken rock. The Fortuna was old and worm-eaten. The rock crashed right through her planks. The ship pounded and quickly broke up. The men had to swim for it.

The lives of some of them, at least, were saved in a curious way—by two pigs. These animals we had brought from Germany aboard the Seeadler to serve as fresh pork. They soon became pets, however, and we kept them. They were quite companionable and romped around the decks with the men. Kling had them aboard the Fortuna. When the ship sank, the swimmers, including the two pigs, found themselves among sharks. These seemed to prefer pork to human flesh. They seized the two pigs and began to fight over them among themselves.

You bet the men in the water swam as hard as they could. They were quickly picked up by native canoes that had put out as soon as the wreck of the ship had been seen from shore.

The cargo of the Fortuna consisted of Parisian fineries, silk stockings and underclothing, handkerchiefs, parasols, tennis shoes, brilliantine, scented soaps, perfumes, and such. It had been destined for the natives of the South Seas, to whom the French bring a truly Parisian elegance. In the breaking up of the ship, many cases filled with these swanky trappings of civilization remained afloat. The natives salvaged them, and pretty soon it seemed as if the whole island had been on a shopping tour through Paris and had visited the women's shops chiefly, or the Galeries Lafayette. Men and women alike arrayed their dusky selves in all manner of silks and lingerie! The population was delighted. Kling and his men were the bringers of this treasure. They graciously told the natives they could have anything they found, and in return they were granted all the hospitality the island could muster. The Chilean governor, an excellent fellow, placed a house at the disposal of the officers, while the sailors were sought after by the natives as guests in their huts.

They remained on the island for nearly two months enjoying life and surveying the strange monuments there, huge monoliths that tell of an ancient, forgotten civilization of people who long since have passed into oblivion. On November 25, a Chilean steamer that made regular trips to the island hove in sight. When it raised steam for its return voyage, our men were aboard. The Chilean authorities on the mainland received them with friendly hospitality, regarding them as shipwrecked sailors and therefore not interfering them. They lived as guests of German colonists in Chile from then on until the end of the war.

CHAPTER XVII

The Escape From New Zealand

The thought of every prisoner is—escape! That was what we thought about, by Joe, and what we dreamed about. Occasionally, I'd wake up with a start, dreaming we were still in our small boat and about to be dashed against that coral reef. Usually my sleep was not troubled with such nightmares. But I often dreamed of getting away, capturing another ship, and continuing our cruise. This did finally come about, but not for many months.

No opportunity of escape presented itself during our stay at Suva, which was not long. Kirchheiss and I were shipped from the Fijis to a little isle off the coast of the north island of New Zealand, right near the entrance to Auckland harbor. The other four went to the island of Some, where they had a hard time under a bad camp commander, a Major Matthis. No chance to escape came their way, but with Kirchheiss and me it was different. We had a highly exciting time, and thus were spared the mental and physical stagnation that is the lot of the average prisoner of war.

The public of New Zealand was inflamed against us. When we arrived there was a great outcry and demand that we be shot. This amazed us, but we discovered the reason a few days later. You see the inhabitants of these islands thought that we had sunk the big New Zealand passenger steamer Wairuna, with all on board. As a matter of fact, we knew nothing of the Wairuna and hadn't even heard of her. Later, it developed that she had been captured by our fast auxiliary cruiser Wolf, sister ship of the Moewe, and her crew taken aboard as prisoners.

The rage of the public was such that the authorities had to hide us away in their naval barracks at the Devonport torpedo yard, and then transfer us secretly to a prison camp on the island of Motuili, nearby.

Meanwhile, the populace clamored for us to be turned over to them so they could lynch us.

The little island of Motuili, a beautiful strip of land, had long been the internment place of many Germans who had been captured when the British seized our possessions in Samoa and in other parts of the South Seas.

They were all civilians, from ten to seventy years of age, traders, plantation owners, and officials. They greeted us with pride and affection, but more particularly with anxiety. They said we were sure to be shot. I laughed at this. "By Joe, who wants to kill us? On what grounds could mere prisoners of war be shot down in captivity?" I asked.

But things looked a little less rosy when, forty-eight hours later, we were taken by boat to Auckland and then whisked by automobile, under cover of night, through valley and forest to a freight train pulled up in a wild, remote place. They locked us up in a freight car, where there were two beds.

They told us it was to protect us against the public. The train pulled out, and after an all-night journey, stopped near the outskirts of the city of Wellington, the capital of the islands that comprise New Zealand.

Here they put us into another automobile and rushed us to the Danish barracks in Wellington, an old jail, a relic of the terrible days when New Zealand was a convict settlement.

A native keeper who led us along a corridor tugged at my coat and pointed into a cell. There were my boys, Leudemann, Krauss, Parnien, and Erdmann. They were in chains. We were all to stand trial together. We spoke to one another for a minute, and then Kirchheiss and I were led to our cells.

On the following day Kirchheiss and I were taken aboard an old cruiser in the harbor and ushered into the saloon, where there were about a dozen men who wore black coats and four-cornered caps with tassels. Our four boys were standing in a corner. I was boiling mad.

"What's this?" I said. "Is justice becoming ridiculous? Why are we put in jail like this and some of my boys in chains? Is that for prisoners of war? And what man of you is able to judge of our warfare? You are civilians. Are we to be judged by civilians? I will answer only to naval men."

Just then Sir Hall Thompson, British naval commander in New Zealand waters, came down the stairway. I turned to him.

Dyers Making Use of Tree Once Condemned

Every country or section of a country as it grows casts about for more and more resources that can be converted into marketable finished products. The American Southwest has taken the common hedge apple tree otherwise known as the Osage orange, the bow wood or the bois d'arc tree. A row of these trees compose what farmers call a hedge fence.

In the old days its roots were smoked by boys to whom tobacco was forbidden. Otherwise, the hedge tree, with its manifold fruit of large green balls, was unpopular. Farmers condemned it because, when used as a hedge, it would not hold their cows and hogs. Motorists cursed it because it shut off their view at cross-roads, the hedge tree appeared to be of little use. A few factories bought it to make wagon spokes and fellows.

A new day, however, is dawning for the hedge apple tree. It is being turned into the hoppers of some of the country's large dye factories. This is developing into a real industry in Texas and Oklahoma.

The hedge apple tree is also excellent material for telephone cross-arms and insulator pins. What is left of the tree is utilized in the making of fertilizer. Long ago the Indian made bows of this wood.

Don't Worry

Fear and worry are as unnecessary as they are debilitating. They are our race's heritage from the dim dawn of time, and only clear-thinking, audacious souls have risen above them, says American Magazine.

"I Could Never Get Along without 'Kitchen-Tested' Flour"

Mrs. Roy Smith Declares This New-Type Flour Banishes Baking Failures and Worry

"I could never get along without GOLD MEDAL 'Kitchen-tested' Flour," says Mrs. Smith. "When I use this new-type flour there's nothing to worry about, no matter what I make. I am sure that one who uses it need never worry about losing her husband if the old saying is true that, 'The way to a man's heart is through his stomach.'"

Baking Failures and Worry Are Now Banished Forever

NOW when women bake they are always sure of perfect results—no watching, waiting and worrying until bread or pastry comes out of the oven.

They use a new-type flour for all baking purposes—GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour—that simplifies baking remarkably and banishes the cause of most baking failures.

Failures, experts found, were mostly due to the fact that 2 sacks of the same flour often acted differently, even with the same recipe...

Evidently His First

In the jumble of Pittsburgh traffic an excited chap suddenly jumped from his car, which he left blockading everything, and while startled pedestrians stopped to stare, ran up to a passing street car, and rapped frantically on a window. The man in the car turned his head. "A boy!" the maniac in the street yelled joyfully, trailing the car, indifferent to danger. "Eight pounds and fourteen ounces!"

The things that are really for thee gravitate to thee.

ONE PRESCRIPTION MADE FAMILY DOCTOR FAMOUS

Seldom has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than that of Dr. Caldwell in 1885, when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote the prescription as he found men, women and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, no energy, lack of appetite, and similar things.

Demand for this prescription grew so fast, because of the pleasant, quick way it relieved such symptoms of constipation, that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is always ready at any drugstore.

Waltzing Mice Help in Work of Mine Rescues

The rescue squads of the mining districts are often compelled to enter mines where the air is likely to be charged with gas that would make it impossible for human life, but the presence of this gas is not apparent to the nose. In order to protect themselves it has been the custom for these men to carry a canary bird along with surgical supplies, foods, tools and oxygen apparatus, because the bird is quickly affected by even a small amount of gas and invariably warned the rescue workers of the fatal and invisible fumes.

In the future, however, Japanese waltzing mice will replace the little yellow songsters, because experiments have shown that the curiously behaving rodents from the Orient are much more sensitive to deadly gas than canaries are. In addition to this the mice are harder and are not often fatally stricken by their experience, whereas the birds are usually sacrificed. They do not recover from the effect of the gas.

Weights Weighty Problem

Officials of the Melbourne royal show at Melbourne, Australia, recently were confronted with what they considered to be a difficult scientific problem. They noticed that when 24 pounds of milk were taken from a cow which had been previously weighed the bossy had lost only 18 pounds. The secretary of the Royal Agricultural society weighed himself carefully, then drank one pound of water. He was astonished to find that he had gained only 10 ounces in weight. The test was made before council stewards and Dr. H. McKenna, the surgeon to the Royal Agricultural society.

Too Shy to Wed

Situated in the lovely fruit-growing district of the Cornish valley of the Tamar, Landulph is said to be the shyest village in England. The young folk there are so nervous of one another that there has been but one marriage at the ancient parish church within the past five years. According to the rector, the young men think more about playing cricket than they do courting. A church warden is optimistic enough to believe that romance will return to the village in due course.

Lutherans Third in Size

The Lutheran church's estimated world membership is 81,000,000 souls. It is third in size to the Roman Catholic church (estimated worldwide membership, 331,500,000; Orthodox Eastern church, 144,000,000) among all Christian denominations.—Time, the News magazine.

Profit in Gardens

When farmers ignore the possibilities of a garden they are overlooking one of the most profitable factors in their field, the Farm Journal points out. An intensively cultivated garden of one acre will produce $1,500 worth of commodities in a year, while a good yield from an acre of corn is worth about $60.

Modern Woodmen Rates Changes Held Valid

Reversing its previous decision, the Illinois Supreme court recently approved the rate changes made by the Head Camp of Modern Woodmen of America, holding that the Society had authority to make the changes in its effort to maintain solvency.

The case, which was decided for the Head Camp of Modern Woodmen, is that of Jenkins and others against Talbot and others, which was originally tried before the Circuit court of Cook county last August, wherein certain groups of members opposing the action of the Head Camp sought to obtain an injunction preventing the changes authorized at the June session of the Head Camp.

This petition for injunction was denied by Circuit Judge William V. Brothers, who entered a decree compelling affirming the Head Camp action of Modern Woodmen of America.

Appeal First Decree
From this decree, an appeal was taken to the Illinois Supreme court and on December 20, 1929, that Court handed down an opinion holding that the action by the Head Camp to remedy the existing conditions was necessary and that the Society had the right and that it was its duty to do what it attempted to do namely: to place the Society on a sound financial basis.

The Court held, however, that an act of the Illinois legislature on June 16, 1919, purporting to authorize the action taken by the Head Camp was unconstitutional because it embraced a subject not expressed in its title, and that therefore the surplus funds on hand under that statute was void.

Cite Earlier Law
The petition for rehearing filed by the Society took the position that the action of the Head Camp was not under the statute in question and that therefore the decree entered in the Circuit court which denied the injunction that had been sought, should be affirmed.

The Society's plan, as adopted, provided for payment of adequate rates to replace former inadequate rates as based on the Society's mortality table, a more favorable table than those forming the basis of other insurance rates.

To aid older members of the Society, more than $30,000,000 of the $39,000,000 on hand was allotted to the older members so that those over 70 could receive cash withdrawal or paid-up insurance values, while those of ages of 67, 68, and 69 were given a rate lower than the level rate for those ages, with the privilege of cash withdrawal and paid-up insurance values at 70. Those under 67 were given a sum sufficient to make up their deficiencies for a one-year period. The sum of $9,000,000 was allotted to members joining since July 1, 1919, that being the amount of their required reserve.

Court Confirms Right
In its opinion, the Court said: "It seems clear that the appellee Society had ample power under this act to effect a readjustment such as herein cited, it became the duty of the Society when it became evident that the methods of its operation were unsound, to readjust its affairs so that it would proceed on a sound basis."

"This it has the authority under the central act of 1893 to do this being so, it does not become necessary to consider the validity of the act of 1919 assailed."

"We find no error in the decree of the Circuit Court, and it will therefore be affirmed."

A brief message was received at the Head Office of the Woodmen in Rock Island before noon Saturday informing the officers of the action by the Supreme court. No statement was issued, pending receipt of the opinion in full by the officers.

The ruling of the Court is regarded here as a key decision. It puts the approval of the Supreme court of Illinois upon the changes made in the Society's By-Laws and modernized insurance plans which were made operative thruout the national jurisdiction of the Modern Woodmen of America at the session of the Head Camp held in Chicago last June when the new plans were adopted by the vote of 475 to 26, marking a new era in the history of the organization.

According to statements made at the time by the Head Officers of the Society the problem faced at Chicago involved nothing less than its solvency, and it was affirmed that the Society could not continue to pay out what it did not possess. The plans adopted had been declared actuarially sound by qualified experts. The full required reserves on all business written after July 1, 1919, approximating $9,000,000 were set aside by the plans for the adequate protection of 420,000 members who had joined the Society since that date. This group was not affected by the plans because they were considered as already paying an adequate rate.

The business written prior to July 1, 1919, was placed on the current cost basis and the sum of $7,000,000 was set aside to make up the deficiencies in mortality payments by members for a period of time during which the opportunity was given to select definite options. On May 1, 1929, the total insurance in force in Modern Woodmen of America was $1,650,000,000. Of this amount $525,000,000 represented insurance written since July 1, 1919. This left $1,125,000,000 on the lives of those who joined prior to that date. Of this latter amount $100,000,000 was carried on the lives of members 70 years of age and over. It was estimated that if the new plans had not been adopted when they were, a $40,000,000 surplus would have been wiped out in a few years.

As matters now stand, the Supreme court decision is said to vindicate the Head Camp's action sustain the new By-Laws and other changes made, and enable the Society to function without interruption.

The New Ford

RUNS economically

THE FIRST COST is only one of the savings in buying a new Ford.
You also save on the cost of financing, on any accessories you may want and on the cost of operation, replacement parts and service.

The economies in distribution are just as important as economies in manufacture in keeping down the price of the Ford. The money you pay goes into increased value for the car. It is not wasted in excessively high selling costs.

On the basis of performance and the inherent worth of every part, the new Ford is unquestionably the greatest dollar-for-dollar value ever offered in an automobile.

Think of the times every day this question is asked in some homes—a really serious question when some one is in a hurry to wash or bathe—to shave—to do the dishes—to clean—or get a dozen odd jobs done... And the tea kettle always seems to be empty. And the furnace coil is undependable at best—and useless in the summer.

Then you'll know that you have a tankful of steaming hot water at all times—day or night. Just turn the faucet and let it run out. The Traveled Can EVERYWHERE in the world today you will find tin cans, and most of them are American tin cans. From all the capitals of the world and from cities and countries so out-of-the-way that you scarcely seem to have heard of them, requests for American canned foods flow constantly in to the Department of Commerce in Washington.

From Many Lands

A list of the countries and colonies from which such requests came during only two months of last year comprises Africa, Argentina, Austria, Canada, China, Colombia, Cuba, Cyprus, Denmark, Egypt, England, Estonia, Ethiopia, France, French Indo-China, Germany, the Irish Free State, Italy, Japan, Java, Mexico, Natal, New South Wales, New Zealand, Norway, Panama, Poland, Porto Rico, Scotland, South Africa, Southern Rhodesia, Spain, Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Sweden, Switzerland, Syria and West Africa.

Do You Know These?

In addition to the world's capitals and well-known cities these requests came from localities that, to many of us, are little more than names on a map. These included Mombasa, Africa; Medellin, Colombia; Limassol, Cyprus; Semarang, Java; Tallinn, Estonia; Addis Ababa, Ethiopia; Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia; Medan, Sumatra; and Accra, West Africa.

Among the canned fruits which these cities and countries are seeking to buy are apples, apricots, grapefruit, peaches, pears, pineapple and prunes. Some of the canned fish are codfish, mackerel, oysters, salmon, sardines and shrimps. They want the whole line of canned vegetables and meats, all varieties of soups, and there is a great demand everywhere for our American condensed and evaporated milk.

Weak Humanity

It is as difficult to get a man to admit that he snoots as it is to get a woman to admit her age.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary of the Illinois State Beekeepers' Association.

Four major problems were outlined by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson when he recently addressed the Illinois State Board of Agricultural Advisors, prior to their meeting with Director Clarence F. Buck of the state department of agriculture. They were: Solution of the farm loan situation; and improved program for facilitating farm storage and marketing that would tend toward state supervised inspection, and would enable grain producers to negotiate loans on grain in bonded storage at point of origin; a plan of extending to Illinois farmers, through co-operative societies, the aid that may be obtained from the Federal farm board; a thorough study of the state's revenue laws, with the view of assisting in the needed revision of the present tax system.

Smallpox and the marriage of physically unfit people now cost the state money enough to carry out her complete hard road building program, Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, addressing the Illinois State Farmers' institute, declared. He made a strong plea for compulsory vaccination against smallpox and the legal requirement of medical examination prior to marriage.

With the welfare of the beekeeping industry in mind, the state department of public welfare and of public works and buildings, are including the tulip, and linden, or basswood, trees in the list of those that are to be planted under the plan for beautifying Illinois highways by the planting of trees and shrubs. The tulip was included in the original list but the linden is being added at the suggestion of the Illinois State Beekeepers' association.

According to reports released by the industrial commission of the state of Illinois, building permits issued during January, 1930, in 45 cities reporting in the state authorized 794 building projects with an estimated cost of $7,443,357. This estimated cost is 12.3 per cent below December and 55.4 per cent below the figure for January a year ago.

Senator Otis Glenn of Illinois has been appointed chairman of the subcommittee of the committee on privileges and elections to investigate the credentials of Senator Patrick J. Sullivan of Wyoming, appointed by the governor of that state to succeed the late Senator Francis E. Warren.

Complete reorganization of the division of standards, which has to do with the inspection of weights and measures, is announced by the director of trade and commerce, Leo H. Lowe. This division, of which the superintendent is W. T. Fossett, has 12 inspectors, as follows: W. A. Carleton, Hinsdale; Francis J. Beckman, Waukegan; Fred Schumacher, Sterling; Howard Rapp, Prophetstown; Frank T. Scott, Peoria; George A. Ritchey, Mount Sterling; Jesse Bowman, Monticello; C. Randall Bear, Urbana; R. C. Hall, Litchfield; E. L. McCracken, Alton; W. J. Stephenson, Mount Vernon; M. D. Nester, Harrisburg. The inspectors travel in state-owned trucks carrying test weights necessary in this work. All communities in Illinois are visited by these inspectors except cities of over 25,000 population which have municipal inspectors.

Realizing that giving information to farmers, seedmen and students, in regard to seed inspection and analysis is as important as administering the laws requiring purity of seeds for Illinois markets, Phil S. Haner, superintendent of plant industry in the state department of agriculture, with the assistance of Albert C. Wilson, chief seed analyst, and his staff of seed inspectors, has conducted seed demonstrations in 20 Central Illinois counties. Average attendance was more than forty. As a result, the volume of seed samples mailed to the seed laboratory at 200 1/2 East Monroe street, Springfield, for free examination, has more than doubled.

It is possible that many do not yet know that a tract of 3,270 acres of land has been purchased by the state department of conservation as a state forest. The land lies in Union county, about five miles northwest of Jonesboro and Anna in the upland timber belt back from the Mississippi river. This land can be used for timber production, watershed protection, wild life administration, and recreation. All these features are now considered assets of forest land, strongly urged by foresters.

Congressman William E. Hull of Illinois has introduced in the house of representatives a bill calling for a survey of the Hennepin canal from Bureau Junction on the Illinois river to Rock Island on the Mississippi, with a view to securing a navigation channel nine feet in depth and of suitable width, by dredging and enlarging the locks; also to determine whether it is practicable to reduce the number of locks in this waterway. This would permit barge line boats to move through the canal and save 400 miles between St. Paul and Chicago.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has just appointed five members of the Illinois state museum board of advisers, as follows: Fay Cooper Cole, University of Chicago, ethnology; Prof. Warren G. Cornelius, Chicago, manufacturing arts and the fine arts.

Millhouse, director of mines and minerals: State mine inspectors: First district, Dalzell, Peter Faletti; second, Peoria, Harry C. Hindson; third, Canton, Thos. P. Back; fourth, Springfield, Harry Marshall; fifth, Danville, Fred T. Hodges; sixth, Carlinville, John K. Plumlee. Inspector-at-large, Springfield, Thomas English; economic investigator, Greenville, W. L. Morgan; Fluorspar inspector, Rosiclare, Edward Smith.

John H. Camlin of Rockford, widely known Illinois business man and civic worker, is a candidate for re-election to the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States from the sixth district, comprising Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin, at the annual meeting in Washington, D. C., April 28 to May 1. Mr. Camlin has the endorsement of the board of directors of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce and of many prominent local chambers. For seven consecutive years, Mr. Camlin was president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, of which he was one of the founders, and a member of the board of directors since its organization in 1919.

Classes in the usual high school commercial courses are well under way at the Illinois state reformatory at Pontiac, with an inmate enrollment of about 30. Standard intelligence tests are given as a basis for selection of students for these classes and those failing to make satisfactory progress are replaced by others who can qualify. These classes are part of the plan of the state department of public welfare pointing toward the rehabilitation of the inmates whenever possible.

The cornerstone of the new cell house at Pontiac was laid Saturday afternoon, February 8, at 1:30 o'clock. Letters from Governor Emmerson and Director of Public Welfare, Rodney H. Brandon, who could not be present, were read. Col. Frank D. Whipp made the address.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson was a banquet speaker at the meeting of the Republican Editorial association of Missouri, at the American hotel, St. Louis. His subject was "Influence of the Country Press on State and National Affairs." Governor Caulfield of Missouri also appeared on the banquet program. Governor Emmerson was accompanied to St. Louis by H. L. Williamson, secretary of the Illinois Press association, who spoke in the afternoon on "The Illinois Legal Rate for Printing."

Less than 12 1/2 per cent of the commitments to the state's penal institutions in 1929 came from rural communities, Rodney H. Brandon, director of the state department of public welfare, declared before the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Illinois State Farmers' institute. Director Brandon said that he believed that this condition was due to the greater opportunities for vocational training in the rural districts.

Formal approval of the Lincoln Memorial highway from Hodgenville, Ky., birthplace of the emancipator, to Springfield, has been given by the Kentucky state senate. Indiana and Illinois have previously given their approval to the project.

Congressman Henry T. Rainey, of the Twentieth Illinois Congressional district, has introduced in the house of representatives a bill which contains constructive propositions for the relief and revamping of the federal land bank system.

Col. Frank L. Smith has announced that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination as congressman-at-large, subject to the primaries next April.

The monthly report issued by Director John G. Millhouse of the state department of mines and minerals, shows that the mines of the state produced 6,590,275 tons of coal, approximately 400,000 tons less than in January, 1929. This loss is attributed largely to the strike in the Peoria district.

Immediate construction of a woman's building and speedy repair of present structures on the state fair ground at Springfield were decided upon at the organization meeting of the state fair advisory board recently appointed by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson. State Representative Homer J. Tice was elected president of the board.

John G. Millhouse, director of the department of mines and minerals attended the Coal Men's club annual banquet recently held at the Jefferson hotel, St. Louis.

Lesson for March 2

JESUS TEACHING ABOUT HIMSELF

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 11:2-12:50.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of All.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Great Helper.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Jesus Was.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Lord's Testimony Concerning Himself.

1. How the Kingdom Was Received (ch. 11).

In showing the attitude of heart of the people, four classes of hearers are described.

1. The perplexed hearers, like John the Baptist (vv. 2-11).

John believed that Jesus was the Christ (v. 2), but was somewhat perplexed as to the manner of the establishment of the kingdom. The Baptist had in his preaching mainly emphasized the line of prophecy which made the King to be a mighty conqueror (Matt. 3:10-12). He said that the ax is laid unto the root of the tree and that there was to be a separation of the chaff from the wheat and a burning of the chaff. John saw Christ as the one who would remove the sins of the people by the shedding of His blood (John 1:29), but he failed to see the interval between the time of His suffering and the time of His triumph.

2. Violent hearers (vv. 12-19).

These were willing to receive the kingdom according to their own way, but were unwilling to conform to its laws. They seized it with violent hands. They would not repent when called upon to do so by John, nor rejoice to do so when called upon by Christ (vv. 17-19).

3. The stout-hearted unbelievers (vv. 20-24).

In Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum, Christ had done most of His mighty works, but the people deliberately set their hearts against Him and His message. Tyre and Sidon were filled with immoral profligates and idolaters, but they will be more tolerably dealt with in the Day of Judgment than will those who wilfully reject Jesus Christ.

4. Hearers who are babes in spirit (vv. 25-30).

There were some among the people who heard Jesus with childlike faith. They believed that Jesus was the Messiah and opened their hearts to receive Him.

II. The Antagonism to Jesus (ch. 12).

In chapter eleven we saw the shameful indifference of the Jews to their King. In this chapter we see the positive and bitter antagonism manifesting itself against Him. The immediate occasion of their wicked determination was Christ's relation to the Sabbath.

1. The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath (vv. 1-8).

The hungry disciples were plucking corn on the Sabbath. With this the Pharisees found fault. To their cavils Christ replied, and showed that God's purpose in instituting the Sabbath was to serve man's highest interests and to contribute to his happiness.

(1) He is greater than their greatest King, David (vv. 3, 4). (2) He is greater than their sacrifice and priesthood (v. 5). (3) He is greater than the temple (v. 6). The temple, with its gorgeous rites and ceremonies, was but typical of Himself. (4) He is greater than the Sabbath (v. 9), for He is the very Lord of the Sabbath.

2. Healing the withered hand (vv. 9-14).

In order that they might accuse Him, they asked, "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath days?" Jesus' reply was both a question and a declaration.

3. The unpardonable sin (vv. 22-32).

The occasion of their blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was the casting out of the demon. In this act, Christ displayed His power to cast out demons. The effect of this miracle was twofold: (1) Upon the multitude. They were amazed, and cried out, "Is not this the son of David?" (2) Upon the Pharisees. When they heard what the people were saying, their anger and satanic malice were aroused. They said He was casting out demons by the prince of the demons. With unanswerable logic, He met their accusations and demanded decision. He charged home upon them their awful guilt. They had attributed the work of the Holy Spirit to the devil. This Christ calls the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, for which there is no pardon.

The Last Step Wins

It is the last step that wins, and there is no place in the pilgrim's progress where so many dangers lurk as the region that lies hard by the portals of the celestial city. It is when heaven's heights are full in view that hell's gate is most persistent and full of deadly peril.—A. B. Simpson.

Stability and Sincerity

Stability and sincerity go together. A true Christian will hasten from wrong.—John Timothy Stone.

Plane Fights Malaria
To combat the spread of malaria, paris green dust sprayed from underneath the carriage of a plane, which is able to cover thousands of acres of swamp land in a day, is proving to be the death of mosquito larvae.
The first experiment was conducted by a marine corps airplane in Haiti. According to a report of Samuel W. Honaker, consul at Port-au-Prince, the first trial was entirely satisfactory and areas, which were not liveable, are now cleaned up.

Thrifty Indians
The Seminole Indians of Florida, instead of taking their game to the ice box, are taking the ice box to the game. The redskins of Collier county drive ice-filled trucks into the Everglades hunting grounds and rush their kill to the moving refrigerator, according to Paul C. Albritton, circuit judge of Sarasota county, who found that Indians are one up on their white brethren. By the time a truck is filled another is ready.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1930, Western Newspaper Union.)

"How vast and profound is the influence of the subtle powders of heaven and earth. We seek to perceive them, and we do not see them, we seek to hear them and we do not hear them: identified with the substance of things, they cannot be separated from them."

CODFISH WAYS

One way of serving codfish, which is usually very popular, is with baked potatoes. The codfish is parboiled, broken into small pieces and added to a drawn butter sauce, or a rich white sauce, or simply plenty of butter added and served hot with the potatoes.

As fish balls, there is nothing better for breakfast or a luncheon dish.

Parboil in a large piece, drain and lay in melted butter and baste it while heating either on the range or in the oven. Serve when the butter has been well soaked in.

Scalloped Cod.—Flake one and one-half cupfuls of soaked codfish, or the fresh may be used if available. Chop one onion, one green and one red pepper, removing the seeds and white fiber, a tablespoonful of chopped capers or green pickle. Arrange the codfish in layers with the peppers and cover the whole with a half cupful of buttered crumbs. Bake, adding one and three-fourths cupfuls of white sauce with the codfish, before the crumbs are added.

Codfish Souffle.—Take two cupfuls of mashed potatoes, one cupful of shredded codfish, two beaten eggs (separate the whites and yolks), add one-half of a green pepper diced, one-half of an onion chopped fine, and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Mix all of the ingredients, adding salt and pepper and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites at the last. Bake in a buttered baking dish in a moderate oven. The onion and pepper may be cooked in the butter, then added to the fish and egg yolks. Serve with string beans, green peas or onions.

Codfish Pie.—Put a layer of nicely seasoned mashed potato in a well buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of codfish which has been parboiled and cover with plenty of butter. Cover with another layer of potato, brush with egg and milk and bake in a hot oven until the potato is well browned on top. Serve from the dish with cabbage cole slaw, using vinegar enough to make the dish snappy in flavor.

Good Things We All Enjoy.

At this season of the year when we enjoy pork roasts, chops and spare-ribs, try this:

Roast Stuffed Spare-ribs.—Rub the outside of the spare-ribs with seasoned flour and stuff with the following:

Onion Stuffing.—Take one pint of bread crumbs, one cupful of corn meal, one chopped onion, one tart apple also chopped, one-fourth of a cupful of chopped celery, two tablespoonfuls of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Mix with hot milk to moisten. Place in the spare-ribs and roll. Bake as usual.

Spanish Beans.—Soak a pint of navy beans over night, cook in the same water until the skins slip off easily. Turn into a bean pot or casserole and add one onion, one cupful of tomato, one small green pepper, one pimiento, three tablespoonfuls of molasses, one teaspoonful of mustard and one-half cupful of pork cut into small dice. Cut the vegetables into dice and bake as usual.

English Chicken Salad.—To one five-pound fowl add a tablespoonful of salt, herbs tied in a small cloth, using two sprigs of thyme, one of marjoram, a bay leaf, two sprigs of parsley. Simmer until the fowl is tender. One-half hour before it is done add one-half pound of bacon cut into bits. Remove the largest bones from the fowl and arrange a layer in a baking dish, cover with one-half pound of mushrooms that have been sautéed in butter five minutes, or use the chicken fat; add hard cooked eggs, using three cut into slices. Continue until the dish is full. Add three cupfuls of the chicken broth which has been slightly thickened by cooking with flour. Cover with flaky pastry in triangles, bake until well browned. Season well before adding the pastry and if wanted especially good add some rich cream and less broth.

Hot Toasted Cranberry Sandwiches.—Broil cold boiled ham in a hot frying pan, lay on buttered toast, cover with hot cranberry sauce and sprinkle with chopped cheese. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Cranberry jelly seems to puzzle many cooks to get it just right. If the directions are carefully followed good results will always be obtained. Cook four cupfuls of cranberries in one cupful of boiling water twenty minutes, put through a sieve and add two cupfuls of sugar; cook five minutes, stirring well. Pour into molds and chill.

Curly leaf dock, field sorrel and horseradish cooked together, make an especially good dish of greens.

ULTRA SMART EVENING GOWN; AN OUTDOOR "SET" OF TWEED

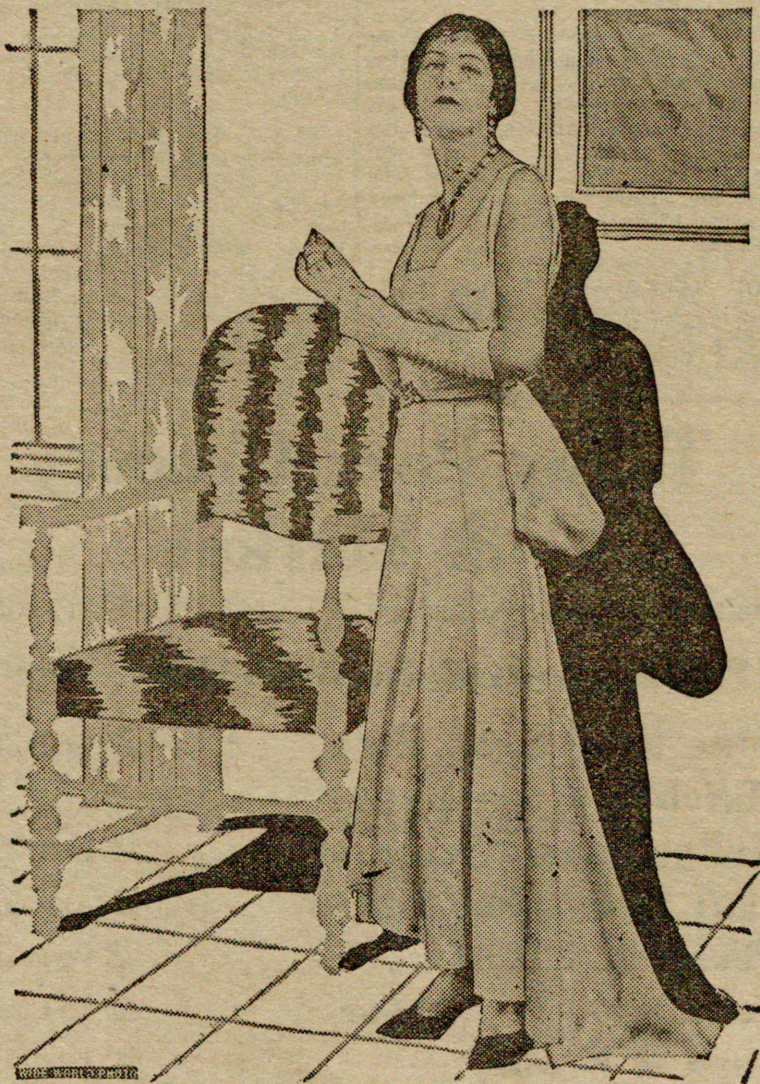

JUST Imagine—trains! It is only too true, that with all the other breath-taking style innovations which are causing such a flutter of excitement these days, here come trailing frocks—of course, for very formal evening only. For the woman who has had no experience with trains and few of us have had in this day and generation, what a dilemma!

Evidently fashion is determined to make real "ladies" of us this season and introducing trains is one way of doing it for to "complete the picture," or rather, not to spoil it. It becomes imperative that the gentle art of gracefully maneuvering the train be wardrobe within themselves, they answer, single or en suite, to most every versatile call of temperature and time and place.

As tweeds now are, black and white newspaper print cannot carry the caress of their beguiling softness, their fairlike lightness, the novelty of their loose weaves or the enchantment of their bright or pastel colorings as the case may be. The tweed which makes up the ensemble in lower picture measures up to all these qualifications plus a smart tailoring which adds a finishing touch to its chic.

For morning and sports wear French designers are directing much mastered by its wearer. Perhaps some enterprising establishment will see its opportunity to cover itself with glory and to win the deep gratitude of its clientele by presenting with each evening frock purchased a set of printed rules on "how to manage trains."

True, the beautiful gown of Ivory white satin pictured bears a very modest train, but there are others on fashion's program which are much more imposing and sweeping in effect.

And then there's the bustle effect suggested by this gown. Oh, well, now that we are coming to trains, and short puff or cap sleeves, waistlines, fall-off-the-shoulder décolletés and all that, we might as well accept bustle silhouettes—and some of the very most fashionable are doing just that. Often these new lines are achieved with huge butterfly bows with wide trailing streamers. A very new silhouette shows tiers of flounces, extended only across the back from the waistline down to the hemline which is en train.

Another item about this gown which is so style-revealing is its narrow belt which defines a high waistline. Ever of their attention to the new light, lovely woolens. These include nubbed and flecked tweeds, checks, diagonals, faconne woolens (the dot pattern prominent), striped, also bordered effects, embroidered or printed jersey, also lace-weave jersey and a host of other intriguing woolens.

Interest centers not only about the weaves and patternings of the new woolens. Much of their novelty and winsomeness is due to their play on color. Those who favor bright hues, such as the new bright blues, the popular reds, greens and orange shades, not to forget black, brown and white mixtures will find that this season's woolens exploit all these. Likewise, those who affect the more esthetic pastel shades will be delighted with the program of fastidious tones and tints offered in the worsteds.

Cape costumes which play up the new and voguish lighter shades, as worn at Palm Beach and California resorts, have set the pace for spring woolen modes. For instance, a most charming ensemble uses pink jersey for a beautifully tailored one-piece frock, the same topped with a cape of the same material. The vogue for "baby colorings" is becoming increasingly apparent with the approach of spring and summer.

Unusual effects are achieved in color combinations as interpreted in fascinating suits and ensembles styled of lightweight woolens. Per example, the blouse worn with a pale blue flannel suit is apt to be in a modish yellow or rose color with a matching chiffon handkerchief in the pocket.

No Rumble Seats for Elsa

By LILLIAN M. MITCHELL

(Copyright.)

IT WAS on the tip of her tongue to say no, she wouldn't go! Say it? No, scream it and stamp her foot in the bargain. Instead a smile curved her lips upward and she said to him: "Thanks, Ted, I'll love to go, of course."

Ted Frear was always considered Elsa's especial property. They weren't engaged to be married but it was more or less understood amongst the crowd that sometime when Ted had enough saved up to buy a flat full of furniture or such furniture as these fold-ups needed they would be married.

Elsa, though, was beginning to have her doubts about the matter. Ted liked her to wear good clothes and in his position he really needed them. That they cost a pretty penny, though, could not be denied. And when Ted dressed well, Elsa had to dress well, too, or she knew she would have the effect of a poor relation in a visit.

That was the reason she had bought her fur coat. She had paid a little more for it than she had intended to pay when she entered the store. Oh, not much more! But enough that each payment was ten dollars more than she had planned and the time was strung out four months longer, too. It was a beautiful coat. Ted had told her over and over again how proud he was of her in it and so Elsa didn't much mind her skimpy lunch-eons and her breakfasts that had to be limited to a glass of orange juice in order to make the payments.

When Ted bought the new car, Elsa hadn't cared much about the one with the rumble seat.

The trouble lay in the fact that whenever they did take anyone along, the rumble seat was windy and cold and if the girl they took didn't have a fur coat, Elsa, being as one might say the hostess, could not very well let the guest sit out in the cold when she herself had a comfortable fur coat. Thus it had come about that the girl guest generally sat inside with Ted and Elsa all dressed up in her fur coat sat in the rumble seat with the man guest who was often a man she didn't care a whoop about.

And inside she would see the girl sit closer and closer to Ted who had an unusually low voice. It really was necessary to sit close to Ted to hear him. He always drove fast which necessitated close watching of the road ahead. His eyes on the road, his lips could never be seen.

"Mary and Bob are going along with us, Elsa," Ted said now.

"Oh—yes?" said Elsa.

Elsa wanted to rumple the hair on his temples as she looked at him but she resolutely turned her face the other way.

On the way home she stopped in and bought the little jersey sport suit she had wanted for several weeks. That night she wore it. When they stopped for Mary and Bob, Mary smilingly waited for Elsa to get out and jump up on the high rumble seat. Elsa smilingly greeted her and made no motion to leave her seat in the front of the car.

"Say, Elsa—I hate to speak of it—but aren't you going to sit in the rumble seat—as usual?" Mary asked finally, wrinkling her nose in a pretty, kittenish fashion she had.

"Oh," Elsa said languidly. "I can't tonight, Mary. I'd freeze in this thin little suit."

"Well, why didn't you wear your fur coat?" demanded Mary, a trace of anger in her voice.

"Why don't you wear your own?" asked Elsa lazily.

"I'll have to go upstairs and get it," Mary murmured coldly.

Elsa said nothing.

On the country road, however, Ted said something. Something Elsa had been listening for for a long time. "Say, why didn't you wear your fur coat?" he demanded.

"Because I'm sick and tired of sitting out in the rumble seat and watching some other girl snuggle up to you," said Elsa with some spirit. "And even in here I'm just freezing to death, if you ask me. You ought to get a heater, Ted."

But Ted had drawn up to the curb and was turned, looking at her. "And you'd rather sit in here—with me?" he asked.

She nodded.

"With—me?" he asked again.

"Yes. Oul, oul. Ja-ja! And like-wise yes!" said Elsa.

"Well, can you tie it?" said Ted in joyous tones. "And I thought you offered to sit in that rumble because you were getting tired of me and would rather have the company of almost anyone we took along instead of having to listen to me. Say—Elsa—what do you say to getting married on Saturday afternoon, eh?"

"M-married?" said Elsa hysterically.

"Well, why not? Haven't we planned it for a long enough time now?" he demanded.

From behind them a sneeze announced that the guests were none too warm. Ted waved his hand back at them and then took Elsa in his arms. The kiss that he gave her wasn't chilly—not at all!

"Sometimes," said Elsa philosophically, "it pays to be selfish—but I'll wear my fur coat Saturday."

"Um-um," agreed Ted, pulling into gear reluctantly. "But you're not going to ride in the rumble again—ever!"

A Sour Stomach

Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. To Curb Gypsy Wanderings

France is striving today to stop the aimless wanderings of the gypsy tribes of Syria by offering them land to till and houses in which to live. Although the instinct to rove on the part of these nomads has dominated them for centuries, French colonial officials are confident that they can be made sedentary and point to the changes that have been brought about in the habits of some of the tribes.

There are millions of people in China who have never seen nor eaten rice.

Former Mokena

Man A Suicide

Suicide was the explanation given for the death of Gilbert Cooper, 45, until recently president of the Ideal Concrete Co., of Joliet, and one time of Mokena, whose body was found in a municipal stone quarry near Joliet Friday night.

Cooper's car was parked less than a block away from the quarry, in which water stood about 4 feet deep. His hat and overcoat were on the bank. There were no marks of violence on the body.

Two small boys playing around the quarry discovered and the father of one of the boys summoned Sheriff Albert E. Markgraf, who recovered the body. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide by drowning.

Cooper was married and had two children, Chester and Myrtle 9 together with his widow survive, also his father George Cooper, Sr., of St. Petersburg, Florida, one sister Maude also of that city, two brothers Walter and Herbert of Mokena.

Sheriff Markgraf learned that on Thursday last he had been voted out as president of the concrete company which he had founded. He had met with financial reverses in Florida land deals and in the recent stock market crashes.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the Richard st. M. E. church, Joliet. Burial in Elmhurst cemetery, Joliet.
